

If you have a free moment, please take advantage of the following extra credit opportunities available for Ray Bradbury's "Kaleidoscope" (The Illustrated Man). There are multiple options available. But your final product must be error-free and quality work. The due dates are listed next to each assignment. Unfortunately, I will not be able to accept any work after the deadline.

Option 1: A film production company has decided to create a theatrical rendition of Ray Bradbury's short story "Kaleidoscope." They are looking for creative, but artistic designs to attract viewers to their film. The movie poster should accurately capture a moment, scene, or even the story's plot, without revealing the resolution. If you can complete this task and produce a quality poster for Kaleidoscope, you will be award 100 points to replace any zero received for a second semester classwork/homework assignment. Due: May 10th, 2023 #ComingToATheaterNearYou

Option 2: McDougal Littell Literature has decided to include "Kaleidoscope," a short story by Ray Bradbury, in their newest literature textbook for eighth graders. However, they still need an illustrated cover that accurately represents Bradbury's literary work. If you can successfully produce a cover for "Kaleidoscope," you will receive 100 points that can replace any zero received for a second semester classwork/homework assignment. Due: May 10th, 2023

Option 3: A collector is looking for artistic pictures that portray scenes from Ray Bradbury's short story "Kaleidoscope." This task should be completed on poster board (worth 200 points) or canvas/ceiling tile (worth 300 points). Remember, the collector is only looking for pieces that can be displayed. Artistry and quality are key. In exchange for your hard work, the points can be used to replace any zero received for a second semester classwork/homework assignment. Due: May 12th, 2023

Option 4: In the upcoming month, The Atlanta Journal Constitution would like to do a tribute to a variety of famous American authors. They have selected Ray Bradbury to represent the science-fiction genre. Currently, they are searching for comic strips about Bradbury's short story "Kaleidoscope." If selected, your work will be published in their Sunday paper. Your comic strip can present the complete story, or simply illustrate your favorite scene. They will focus on design, organization, artistry, and content. In exchange for your hard work, you will receive 200 points that can be used to replace any zero received for a second semester classwork/homework assignment. Due: May 14th, 2018
